

The full page, hero D in place, mobile at 390 and desktop at 1440.

Concept D opens the page: the message reads first, the two-project reel sits beneath it as the opening frame of the loop. Turn the reel off in Tweaks to see the launch fallback, which is what ships if the reel is not cut in time. Everything below the hero is the page as it will be built. The review form is live in both widths.

MOBILE, 390 REFERENCE

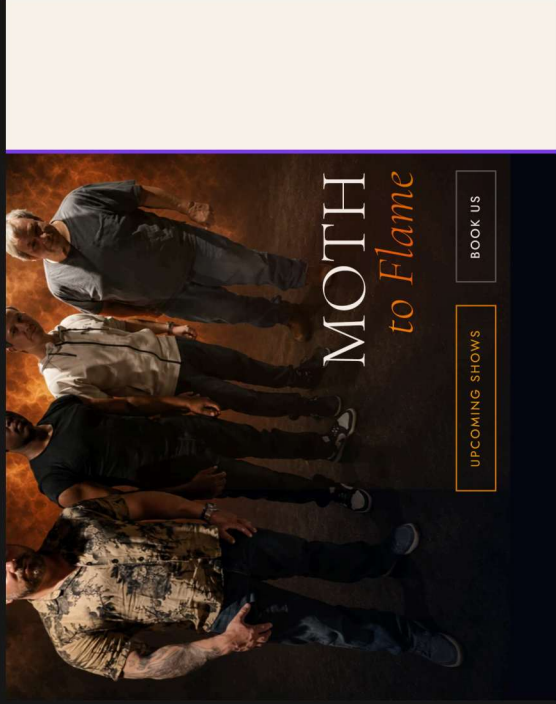

- Headline, supporting line, primary CTA and the reel stage all sit inside the first 844px screen
- See our work is a text link under the CTA, so the reel comes up by about 90px
- Body copy never drops below 16px, the CTA is 52px tall and the work link row is 44px
- Project screenshots are cropped to 300px from the top, still legible
- Pricing is a rule-separated list, not three stacked cards
- Nothing depends on hover, and no section scrolls sideways
- Gutters go to 16px at 320 and the layout holds to 430

01

What you do

Said plainly, in the first sentence, without industry language.

One action, obvious on a phone, reachable without scrolling.

Band and booking site

THE ASK

A site that presents the band and makes booking straightforward for venues and event organisers.

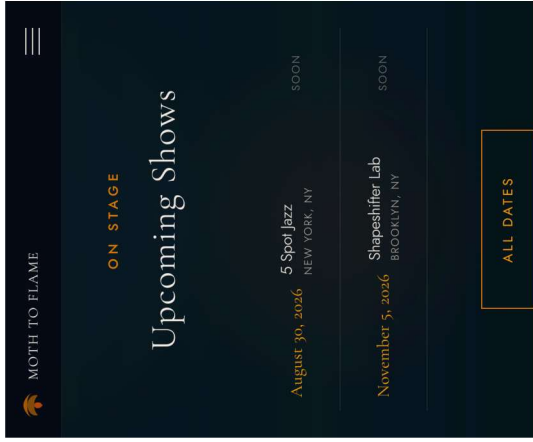

WHAT WE DID

Designed and built the site around the band photography, with upcoming shows and booking as the two actions in the first screen.

KEY DECISION

A dark ground so the photography carries the page, with the two buttons set side by side rather than stacked in a menu.

See the project

Sweet Stax

THE ASK

Improve an existing website that had design, formatting, and usability issues left from the original build.

WHAT WE DID

Worked directly inside the existing Webflow project to identify issues, correct layout and formatting problems, improve consistency, and refine the experience without forcing the client into a complete rebuild.

KEY DECISION

Preserve the existing brand and the working parts of the site, and focus the effort on the areas that were creating visual and usability problems.

VERIFIED GOOGLE REVIEW / THE CLIENT

Site launch studios was able to help with the design of my website when I was getting formatting and a few other errors. He was straightforward, knowledgeable and shared as much information with me as possible. He was able to turn the project around quickly and found issues I did not catch. We utilized Webflow and they were able to drop in like experts. I am happy with the quality of his work, will be leaning on them again, and would recommend them to anyone looking for website building help.

Carlos Flores Iselo, owner of Sweet Stax

The client behind this project describes the same sequence the case study does: an existing site with formatting problems, then the work done inside Webflow to correct it.

Desktop captures of both projects drop in here. The mobile captures above are the real client sites.

Two business days

Three specific things to fix on the site you already have, sent by email.

Why work with SiteLaunch

You talk to the person building it

No account manager between the brief and the build, and no handover halfway through.

Mobile decides the design

The phone layout is drawn first, because that is where most visitors arrive and where most sites fall apart.

Focused scope and real dates

A defined build with a start and an end, so you know when the site goes live.

Built to be found

Page structure, titles and metadata are set up at build time rather than added later.

English and Spanish

Consultations in either language, which matters for a lot of businesses working in South Florida.

Purple used on this page

Kickers, the numbered markers, link underlines, prices, and one button per screen. No purple ground except in a review-form context.

Claims made on this page

Two verified Google reviews, quoted exactly: Carlos Flores Iselo inside the Sweet Stax case study, Tyson Harvey as the featured review lower down.
